QAST Food Safety Supervisor Course

Units covered in this course meet the recognised competency standards for a Food Safety Supervisor in line with the current national food safety training agenda and the Queensland Government's Food Safety Act 2006.

Competency Units

SITXOHS002A (previously THHGHS01B)

Follow workplace hygiene procedures

SITXFSA001A (previously THHBCC11B)

Implement food safety procedures

*Please note SITXOHS002A is a pre requisite unit for completion of SITXFSA001A.

Completion of the courses competency units will also contribute towards SIT31007

Certificate III of Hospitality (Catering Operations).

Further details of these competency units and this qualification can be located at www.ntis.gov.au

The key components of the course are:

- A. Introduction to Food Safety
- B. Food Contamination Hazards and Prevention
- C. Personal Hygiene and Responsibilities for Food Handlers
- D. Safe Food Handling and Storage
- E. Food Safety Programs

QAST has developed this course to be specific for school canteen convenors and uses the tuckshop setting for all examples and case studies.

How is the course delivered?

The course includes a full day workshop either at the QAST training rooms in Brisbane or another suitable venue in your region. There is also a further on site assessment activity completed by the trainee requiring approximately two to four hours of work after the initial course. You will need approximately ten hours in total to complete the course.

How much does the course cost?

QAST is offering this course primarily as a member benefit for Queensland schools, so course fees are heavily subsidised and significantly less than other food safety courses.

Non specific food safety supervisor courses are normally between $180 and $220 per course. The QAST course is $147 for members and $187 for non-members (incl. gst).

Why choose a QAST Course?

QAST has first hand knowledge and experience with tuckshops, which makes sure the information is relevant to what you do and what you need.

We know what it's like to work in the tuckshop and how much extra time you already contribute, so we have included tuckshop specific tools and templates that you can take back to your school and get up and running quickly. We have even included handouts and suggestions that help you train and work with volunteers.

The tasks you need to do to complete the course will actually be able to be used back in the tuckshop, so your valuable time and effort is put to good use.

The course is delivered in workshops with other convenors, so you get to benefit from others' experiences, engage in useful discussions and have your questions answered as you think of them.
